

THE GREEN PAJAMAS SUNLIGHT MIGHT WEIGH EVEN MORE

Green Monkey Records is very happy to announce a surprise new album by The Green Pajamas for 2021! The astonishing, Sunlight Might Weigh Even More, destined to be a landmark in an already impressive discography, features 16 brand new songs in the tradition of their classic trio of albums from the 1990's, Strung Behind the Sun, All Clues Lead to Meagan's Bed and Seven Fathoms Down and Falling. Indeed, when the band members met up via Zoom in the winter of this year Jeff Kelly suggested Strung as their reference point: "I wanted to go back to that whimsy, psychedelia and experimentation," he states, "and freshness of spirit." And he manages on all counts. From the swirling opener, "Menagerie 1," through the psych-pop trips, "High Tea with Miss Ava G.," and "Just to This," to the Tibetan gong introduction of the mysterious closing track, "Holly," the new album does certainly remind one most of 1997's, Strung Behind the Sun in its "freshness of spirit."

As was the case with Strung, Jeff wrote and recorded the majority of this one alone. That said, there are two new Eric Lichter songs, "Sunlight" and "Lovers Lease," as well as the first new Green Pajamas song penned by Joe Ross since 2011, "Down to the Ocean." Sunlight Might Weigh Even More is full of the PJ's trademark memorable melodies, exotic instruments, vocal harmonies and ringing electric guitars, with the occasional analogue synthesizer, birdsong, backwards girls' choir or London rain storm thrown in for good measure.

And though there is that occasional thunder cloud and the rather dark encounter between two goth girls walking across a soccer field at dawn, we're a long way from the bleakness of the last Pajamas album, 2018's, Phantom Lake, the vibe here leaning heavily to the sunny psych-pop that the Green Pajamas remain most associated with, even after 25 albums of remarkable diversity.

To say more would be giving too much away as we here at Green Monkey want loyal Pajamas fans, as well as those lucky enough to be experiencing a Green Pajamas record for the very first time, to hear this new album with the same open-eared excitement we did on first spin. Happy listening!
